Among the celebrated festivals of Spain the annual country fair held in Seville is one of the most interesting and amusing. Peasant folk from many Andalusian districts assemble there, bringing their prize cattle and wearing their picturesque provincial dress. We mingle very intimately with the multitude on the fair grounds and study at close-up range their peculiarities and personalities, getting a very comprehensive idea of the make-up of the masses of Southern Spain. A contrasting festival, held every year in Madrid, is the Royal Birthday Celebration at the magnificent royal palace in the Capital. All of the notables then in town come in gorgeous carriages of state to pay their respects to His Majesty King Alfonso XIII. We watch the arrival and departure of the distinguished guests and study the interested crowds of Madrid as they gaze at the costumed dignitaries in their gilded equipages, attended by superbly liveried flunkies with satin breeches and powdered hair; all this with a striking background of military splendor.

For HOUSE ORGAN:

To see any people at their best, one should see them when they are enjoying themselves. Burton Holmes will take you to Spain..... and, presenting you to the King and Queen, will enable you to "mix up" with your Spanish cousins at holiday time.
